Discovery Walk

The Snow Queen rules the Snow Bees, also known as snowflakes, but since it's summer, head outside and see how many bees you can find and count.

"Bees are an important part of nature. Many plants need bees to help them reproduce. Bees are also helpful to people. People eat honey or use it to make various foods. People also use beeswax to make candles and other products. People use bees to pollinate many crops."

Make Your Own Ice Cream

There are lots of recipes online of how to make your own ice cream. Here's a very simple one, but feel free to explore the web for more ideas.

Three Ingredient Ice Cream

Ingredients:

- 2 cups heavy cream (chilled)
- 1 (14 ounce) can sweetened condensed milk
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

Instructions:

Whip the cream until stiff peaks form. On low speed, mix in the condensed milk and vanilla. Pour into a resealable container, cover the surface with plastic wrap, then seal. Freeze for at least 6 hours, or until firm. Keep stored in the freezer.

Snowflakes

Make it snow in summer with this snowflake craft.
You will need:

- Paper
- Scissors
- Lid or a compass
- pencil

Take one piece of paper, using a compass or a lid, trace a circle onto the paper. Cut out the circle, fold it in half, then fold it in thirds, then fold it in half again. Use your scissors to cut out shapes. Make sure you don't cut away all of the folded edges. Unfold and enjoy your snowflake. How many different snowflakes can you make? Hang them up on your window to make it snow in the summer.
